There is no country, no climate, no al-titude, no solitude that has not been penetrated for the odd and beautiful spe of butterflies here gathered. Some are as tiny as a musquito, and others as large as a half fledged pigeon. The owl moth of Brazil measures a foot across the wings Where do they come from, these many different little creatures! When the second Ross expedition was made in search of a northwest passage in 1827-29 a new species of colias, afterwards called boothii, was found in a few specimens, the only ones known to this day, one of which came later into possession of Strecker's collection. It is the only sample of the species in America. Three of the great papilio antimachus, from equatorial Africa, can be seen here. Only about a dozen are known. Suites of the golden crosses and lydius from Halmeheira the curious Parnassus butterflies from 18,000 feet elevation in the Himalayas and other mountains; the enormous cossus from Australia, which are eaten by the natives; the gorgeous rhaipheus flies from Mada-gascar without a rival in matchless colors. Then come monster curiosities, half male and half female; those of one wing, partly have all helped to this wonderful collec-

He is a very counterfeit of the honey making insect. What a freak is the Oiketieus pair! The female has no wings, no logs, never sees light nor takes food. The winged gentleman goeth as he pleaseth. Then look at the eccentric resemblance of the "anchor moth " On the creamy buff color a black anchor is marked, like a tattooed arm with the tar symbol Here also known to the natives as "eighty-eights," its hind wings. Then there is the curious moth from Sierra Leone, in West Africa, known as the "Argus moth." It is remarkable for the unparalleled length of the tails of the hind wings in the male. Then there is the world famed "dead leaf butterfly" of China, India and the Pacific islands. When the wings are open it has a surface of grayish blue crossed by an orange band; but when closed, as the animal is at rest, the resemblance to a dead leaf is perfect. The day butterflies number 8,000 species; the night flies are ten times as many.
